For Immediate Release: CN Utility Consulting (CNUC) is pleased to announce that it has joined together with Wright Tree Service to provide a comprehensive suite of new services to the utility vegetation management (UVM) industry.

“Wright Tree was a perfect fit for us” stated Stephen Cieslewicz, President of CNUC. “We know, based on our own benchmarking with utility companies across North America, that Wright is one of the most highly respected utility vegetation management service providers in the industry. Their expertise in line clearance and utility vegetation management work perfectly compliments our consulting practice. Equally important, our new relationship with Wright allows us to expand our current service offerings to our utility customers across North America. With financial and ancillary support from Wright Tree we will now be able to offer such services as Pre-inspection, Post-auditing, and Notification Foresters for our existing and future utility clients. We will have quite a few other new and unique service offerings that will also be announced in the very near future.”

Wright Tree’s CEO and President, Scott Packard, is equally pleased with the newly established relationship. “The addition of CNUC to our employee owned company will allow us to better serve our own customer base by having access to the top UVM management consultants in the industry. Our equal commitment to providing world-class services to our customers and the UVM industry will help position us to be the leading service provider in the industry.”

Aside from offering a variety of new joint CNUC/Wright Tree services to our customers, CNUC will continue to be operated autonomously, from California, under the leadership of Stephen Cieslewicz. Robert Novembri, CNUC’s current CEO, will be leaving CNUC but will continue to work on CNUC projects on a part time consulting basis. He will also spend time devoted to non-CNUC/Wright Tree projects such as the continued development and marketing of eVMS.
